MORE

As a partner at Goldstein Hall, Brian Hsu focuses on affordable housing development, banking, cooperative and condominium law, and real estate finance. Hsu frequently presents on housing issues, including affordable housing policy matters, and he has led workshops for the New York Housing Conference and the Local Initiatives Support Corporation, among others. Recently, he helped close Habitat Net Zero, a project for Habitat for Humanity New York City and Westchester that designs energy-efficient homes. He leads Goldstein Hall's developer program, which aims to reduce barriers for underrepresented contractors and developers in the affordable housing development industry. Hsu is on the board of directors of the Habitat for Humanity NYC Fund.
